

Locating the Past Where is Māori History?

He Rau Tumu Kōrero | Māori Historians' Symposium 2011

Tamaki Makaurau | 9 June 2011

E nga iwi, e nga kairapukōrero, nau mai, haere mai ki He Rau Tumu Kōrero.

This is a call for registrations and papers for He Rau Tumu Kōrero – the Māori Historians' Symposium 2011. These one-day symposia showcase the work of Māori researching and writing in Māori historical studies. This year participants are invited to take on the question 'Where Is Māori History?' and to explore and map future directions in the historical representation of Māori and iwi communities.

Locating the Past: Where is Māori History? aims to build on current scholarly shifts away from Treaty and colonial encounter histories towards local Māori and iwi-focused histories across the 19th and 20th centuries. It challenges Māori historians to consider the wider political and academic implications of our work, the flow-on epistemological and methodological concerns, and impacts on the current historiography of Aotearoa New Zealand.

CALL FOR PAPERS * Nga Tohunga | Papers

The organisers of Locating the past: Where Is Māori History? now invite papers on any topic in the Māori past that address the question 'where is Māori history?'. Please email your proposal of no more than 300 words to a.harris@auckland.ac.nz by Monday 2 May 2011. Your proposal should include your name, iwi, organisation, and full contact details.

CALL FOR PRESENTATIONS * Nga Tauira | Graduate Showcase

We are also calling for ten-minute presentations that showcase historical research projects that fit the theme. Tell us about your current research and take advantage of the feedback that the symposium can provide. Please register your interest in the showcase by emailing hirini@whataamo.co.nz by Monday 2 May 2011. Provide a title, your name, iwi, organisation and full contact details. Hirini will be in touch with further details and guidance.

REGISTRATION * Registrations are open

Participant numbers are limited so you must register to attend ($45 for salary and wage earners; $15 for students and unwaged). For details about registration and payment, please email a.harris@auckland.ac.nz. At the end of the symposium debrief, relax, unwind, and enjoy whakawhanaungatanga over a good kai and nice glass of wine. Register for the conference dinner, $45.00 per person.
